This week’s issue

Incorporating companion animals into emergency preparedness planning, p 422

How painful? Assessing veterinarians’ attitudes to chronic pain, p 428

A case of canine distemper imported into the UK, p 433

412 Comment
412 Thinking about gender

413 News and Reports
413 Profession must shape its own future, says BVA President
415 EU must encourage medicines availability and innovation, says NOAH
416 NOAH appoints new chief executive
416 Norbrook plans to stay independent
417 Cattle intern wins vet of the future award
418 Practice fined for health and safety breach
418 Monepantel resistance reported on Dutch sheep farms
418 Honorary post for RVC professor
419 Consortium aims to strengthen surveillance for emerging diseases
420 Veterinary medicines: product update
421 Pig and poultry nutrition research brought together in one centre
421 Modelling the equine hindgut

419 News in Brief

422 Feature
422 One Health and emergency preparedness (K. Stauffer, L. Conti)

426 Research
426 Veterinarians’ attitudes towards chronic pain (J. Brearley)
428 Veterinarians’ attitudes to chronic pain in dogs (A. Bell and others)
429 Development and evaluation of a system to assess antimicrobial drug use in farm animals: results of an Austrian study (C. Ferner and others)
430 Putative candidate genes for canine hypoadrenocorticism (Addison’s disease) in multiple dog breeds (A. D. Short and others)
430 Selection of macrolide-resistant Campylobacter in pigs treated with macrolides (M. Usui and others)

431 Research Digest

432 Gazette

433 Letters
433 Canine distemper imported into the UK (D. Walker and others)
433 PBDEs and feline hyperthyroidism (K. Chow and others)
434 British College of Veterinary Specialists (D. White)

435 BVA News

425 Vet Record Careers

Are you an existing Official Veterinarian?

To remain an OV, register by 9 January 2015 and receive a £20 discount off the registration fee and free access to the Essential Skills OCQ(V).

For further information email us at enquiries@improve-ov.com or call us on 0330 202 0380