With its expanded clinical facilities opening this year, Dick White Referrals (DWR) has appointed Lindsay Kellett-Gregory to develop its emergency and critical care department, with the aim of providing ‘an unparalleled level of care for patients with life-threatening diseases and injuries’. Kellett-Gregory is an RCVS, European and American Recognised Specialist in emergency and critical care, having undertaken her residency at the University of Pennsylvania, and then expanding her experience in the USA before returning to the UK and joining DWR.

Ludivine Boiron has joined the emergency and critical care team at Willows Veterinary Centre and Referral Service in Solihull. She graduated from Lyon in 2008 and completed a rotating internship there. She worked in practice in France and Switzerland before moving to the USA in 2014 to undertake an internship at the University of California, which was followed by a three-year residency at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.
